Kevin: My suggested edits and comments are in the attached documents. I didn't do a great job naming the documents in a way to distinguish them (and once you name a document in our system, you can't change it). The document with the shorter name is the rule, the document with the longer name is the rulemaking notice.

Please let me know if you would like to discuss any of my suggested edits or comments. Again, I'm on vacation next week, so catch me before Friday if it can't wait until August 5.

Kevin: I'm not able to access the Sharepoint documents (it's a DOJ security thing). Could you please forward me copies directly? Thanks.

Subject: RM-DESLGRNT - Draft temporary rule report for team review

You have been selected to be part of the clean diesel grant temporary rule review team.

At this point in the rulemaking process, you are welcome and encouraged to review the draft public notice documents and provide comments. The documents are posted on SharePoint (LINK). The deadline for reviewing the documents and providing comments is Wednesday, July 31, 2013. This is a temporary rule with a permanent rule slated for consideration in March 2014. The review consists of only the staff report and the actual proposed rule itself.

Checking out and reviewing a document: To review a document, you first have to check it out by clicking the arrow just to the left of the date the document was last modified and then choosing "Check Out". After you have checked the document out, click on the name of the document to open it. Please make sure track changes is turned on when editing the document and/or providing comments. Be aware that only one person can check out a document at a time. If the document is already checked out, check back later to see if it is checked back in.

Checking a document back in: If you have made edits to the document or added comments, please save the document once you have completed your review. When you close the document, you will be asked if you want to check the document back in, you would respond yes. If you did not make any edits or added any comments, you will need to check the document back in by again clicking the arrow just to the left of the date the document was last modified and choose "Check In".

Thank you.
