Hello all –

I wanted to send a quick status update on the Oregon kitchen sink action. The re-opened comment period closed June 29th and we received no additional comments.

We're now drafting our final action.

Hope you had a happy 4th of July!

Subject: status update

Hi David and Merlyn,

Debra asked me to send you a status update on the Oregon permitting rule revisions action (aka kitchen sink) and our review of the draft LRAPA rule changes to align with the Oregon changes. I apologize for falling behind and not communicating with you – I got pulled off on some Fairbanks work.

Oregon permitting and general rule revisions – proposed action published March 22, 2017 at 82 FR 14654.

We received two anonymous adverse comments – one general comment about EPA regulations and one about public processes at Division 209. We also received a request to extend the comment period submitted by Earthrise Law Center on behalf of Northwest Environmental Defense Center, Neighbors for Clean Air, and Columbia Riverkeeper.

The request came in at the tail end of the comment period, and didn't allow for enough time to do an extension. In this kind of situation in the past, we have generally re-opened the comment period, soon after the original comment period closed. We drafted a notice to re-open the comment period for an additional 30 days, and it was signed by the Acting Regional Administrator on April 25th. The notice has been sent to HQs, but has not yet been cleared for publication in the Federal Register. We will let you know when that happens.

LRAPA draft permitting and general rule revisions – sent to EPA for review by April 17th. EPA did not meet deadline.

The good news is that three of four EPA reviewers completed their review. I am working with the last reviewer to gather up the remaining few comments. Back in April I talked with Max on the phone about some of our feedback – and I committed to sending an email compiling the feedback. We are behind schedule and I apologize for that. I will do my best to get you an email with our compiled comments by the end of the week.

Please let me know what additional questions come up. Thank you for your patience!
