Jill,

We only need to present to EQC and file with SOS those rules you are amending. When you know which ones those are, we should delete the rest. We do have to retain, adopt and file the whole of any rule, no matter which part you amend.

A few of the rules in you temporary package have tables associated with them. The tables don't appear in the text of the rule in the SOS online publication. you can tell which rules have tables because there is a note at the end of the rule that says the rules are available either by clicking on a link, or from DEQ.

When we adopt and file a rule that has a table associated with it, I have to manually insert those tables into the rules we are working with so that EQC will adopt the tables with the rules and so that the tables will get filed with SOS along with their rules.

Two things about any rules you will amend that have associated tables. If you identify rules like that that you know will be in the EQC package because you are going to amend them, tell me so that I can put the tables in. Second, older rules have the note that says tables are available from DEQ rather than by clicking on a link. This is because SOS previously could not upload tables. So some of the rules in these divisions have a link and some have the note that DEQ has the tables. The current standard is to upload the tables and change the note to say there is a link, rather than to find the tables from DEQ. As a preliminary step, I changed the old notes to the new language. If you are going to amend and send any of those rules to EQC, we want to update that note and include the table. If there are rules where I changed the note, but you are not amending them, we should just delete those rules from the package.
