My comments: First, is it confirmed that companies will only have to install one baghouse? Might they have to install more than one? Is that taken into consideration in the estimate of the cost of a baghouse? I see that the cost spreadsheet makes reference to the possibility that they may need to install a second baghouse, but the narrative document does not say anything about that. You may want to clarify that.

Second, I think you need to revisit this paragraph, in light of EPA guidance that sources don't have to get a Title V permit if they don't trigger any substantive requirements of 6S (i.e., no one furnace makes more than 50 lb/year of metal HAP containing glass):

Tier 2 CAGMs will be required to have Title V operating permits whether or not the proposed rules are adopted because these facilities must comply with 40 CFR Part 63 Subpart SSSSSS - National Emission Standard for Hazardous Air Pollutants for Glass Manufacturing Area Sources. Bullseye currently has an Air Contaminant Discharge Permit, with permit fees similar to a Title V operating permit for a facility of this size, so the proposed rules would have no impact on DEQ revenue or costs for these facilities.

Otherwise, this looks good to me—with the caveat that I have no idea about the costs of compliance.

Thank you, Jill.

I've accepted Jill's edits and also added a new paragraph to the small biz section:

Trautman Art Glass, one of the Tier 1 CAGMs, said that the proposed rules may prompt them to move their facility to a new location. That decision would depend on whether the current property owner agrees to allow installation of a baghouse, as well as other factors internal to their business. The company estimated that moving their factory and complying with the rules at the new location would cost approximately $2 million, plus lost revenue of $1 million during the moving process. DEQ does not have data to verify the necessity to move or the facility's cost estimates for doing so.

The updated draft is attached. I also cleaned up the spreadsheet a bit, since I plan to send that out with the draft narrative.

Does anyone else have edits, comments or questions? I plan to email this out to the advisory committee members at the end of the day today.

Joe!

You've done a really excellent job on this, considering we just threw you to the lions without any guidance! Thank you very much!

I've made some edits but overall, it looks great.
Thanks again,
Jill

Subject: first draft of fiscal impact statement for art glass permanent rule

Greetings,

As you know, I've been working on the fiscal impact analysis for the permanent art glass rule. A first draft is attached (the formatting will be adjusted later). Apologies for any obvious errors- I wanted to get this in front of some reviewers despite a significant time crunch.

Your comments and edits would be very helpful. I hope to send a draft to the fiscal advisory committee at the end of the day on Friday, so if possible please send me your comments (using tracked changes in the document, or just by email) by sometime tomorrow morning.

If you'd like to review but that's not possible based on your schedule, let me know.

Thank you for your input!

-Joe
