Thank you, Meyer. It's true, I did initiate the recording via the phone. I feel very lucky that there is a recording, because I forgot to call in from a 2nd phone to make sure that there were 2 people on the line.

I'll try starting the recording from the webinar interface next time.

PS- I used a laptop to broadcast video of the hearing, but if I do that again I think I'll delegate someone to be camera person (to frame the view and make it more interesting to watch) or forgo the video and just do audio.

I downloaded the recording of the hearing to here:

I think maybe you initiated the recording by using keyboard commands on the phone. Ignore this if that's not the case. For future reference, and I only just learned this, and an explanation is on the rulemaking resources SharePoint here: http://deqsps/programs/rulemaking/SitePages/Rulemaking%20teleconferencing%20information.aspx, there are several advantages to initiating the recording of the audio (teleconference) through the webinar interface, even if you are not using the webinar function to transmit video information. Its cheaper, and the record shows up in a list with all of our meeting recordings, rather than at a unique URL, so its easier to find. You start audio only recording by clicking on "Start Audio only Recording on Server" at the top of the webinar screen, under the "Recording" tab.

Thank you.
