According to DEQ Policy on Signature Authority, rulemaking advisory committee appointment letters should be signed by division administrators or program managers.

EQC has the legal authority to appoint advisory committee members. In theory EQC has delegated authority to the director to do this so we usually have him sign, unless he's unavailable, then we have the deputy director sign. If what our policy says is true, then we should have something that states EQC has delegated authority to the DAs and program managers.

Meyer and I haven't seen any delegation letters, if they exist, but have been operating under the assumption that appointment authority has at least been delegated to the director.

Okay – I am good with that if that is generally what we do!

I'm told adv comm appointment letters are supposed to be signed by the director. But, I've seen one example in the past when it was the head of AQ instead.

Emil, do you want to weigh in on that?

Got it now. Thanks. Looks great!

One question – does the Director always sign letters like these?

Thanks!

Leah, were you able to view it when clicking 'no' as Emil suggests below?

It works for me if I select "NO" when the box pops up. I think it has a mail merge field that it tries to populate when you select "Yes".

Hi Joe,

I can't get to this. I get a series of pop-up boxes. Not sure if others are having this issue…

Hi All,

I've written a draft invite letter for the permanent art glass rule advisory committee members. I plan to print copies for the director's signature at the end of the day tomorrow (Friday).

It's based on an example from Jill and hopefully relatively straightforward, but let me know if you have comments and/or want more time to comment.

(You can click 'no' when it asks about the mail merge.)
