There is not a way to add it to the database served by Data.Oregon.Gov. That is really only a collection device for submissions through the system.

Once the comment period is closed and you have the information downloaded, you will want to create an in-house database or way of compiling all of the comments. I would imaging that Meyer and Emil have a specific way they have all rulemaking comments combined at the end of a comment period, but I would check with them.

Subject: comment that came in by email- add to online comments?

Hi Michele,

We received a comment on the art glass rule by email from the Oregon Health Authority (see attached).

This was received while the comment period was open, but didn't get into the online system where people can view and search for it.

Now that the comment period has closed and the online system doesn't allow further comments to be added, is there still a way to add that OHA comment to the database so people can view it? Leah has requested that we find a way to add it.
