We are in pretty good shape for rulemaking resources right now. Of course that can always change. All rulemakings have to be approved by Dick before we can proceed with them. I meet with him three times a year to review and approve new proposed rulemakings. My next planned meeting with Dick on rulemaking issues will be in September. Once the rulemaking is approved, an average rulemaking takes six to eight months to complete.

These are some links to overall views of the timeline for rulemaking:

Abby,
Based on Rian's communication with the advisory committee, we are likely looking at September at the earliest. Meyer can offer his observations on when we will be able to launch the project based on current rulemaking calendar and ideas in the cue. That could conceivably push the timeline to spring of 2016.

Rian is out of town and I need to give an estimate date for rulemaking resulting from legislation. Do you have an estimate start date for Ballast Water?
