As with many things at DEQ, there are no guidelines. We can get together and talk about it. But the way I look at it is, is there anything brand new we haven't done before for which we want to verify our authority to act. Or are we doing something controversial that is likely to be subjected to a legal challenge. He can review in a few days, so its not a big deal. But I also think DEQ overuses DOJ for routine matters, which is very expensive.

Do we have specific criteria for determining whether AG office review of proposed rules is necessary?
I haven't felt a need to inquire with AAG on any particular issues, but in noting that Larry Knudsen is retiring soon, I thought I better consider whether I should send it his way.

Thanks,
Rian
