Subject: LGBTQ book club for minors at library

To: ScottH@co.wasco.or.us <ScottH@co.wasco.or.us>

Sex based club offered at Wasco Co library for children. Headed up by one adult librarian, romantic LGBTQ novels or other materials are supplied by librarian. Children then return and discuss materials with librarian and others in the group. This is a librarian giving themselves a platform to talk sexual relations with minors without parental consent. I believe some may look the other way because its LGBTQ sex based for political reasons, but if we look at it for what it is, it's still a sex-based club with minors and an unqualified, unsupervised adult. Some may say it's a discussion about a story and the characters, but even porn has story lines and characters. This is a doorway for predators to harm our children in what is supposed to be a safe, unintimidating place of education and learning.

Meetings are taking place upstairs in the sound proof room, with the doors closed. I did go up there by chance to find an Artemis fowl book for my daughter. I over heard the librarian state several times that she wanted the others in the group to recruit more children from the school to come to her book club meetings. The two children in attendance were giving names of kids from their school and ways they could get them to come.

I want the library to be a safe place for all and I think we should protect that. I would never think a librarian should encourage sexual talk, or talk about sexual relations with minors. Whether heterosexual, or LGBTQ, it doesn't belong in our libraries!

Directors reports:

Dufur: Not available.

The Dalles: An interesting situation occurred recently at the library when two police officers appeared in the library. Apparently, the panic button got triggered. When the panic button goes off the first available police officer drops everything and rushes to the library. At the same time, we got a weird phone call from central command wanting to talk to Jeff. They did not identify themselves other than to say they were central command. Turned out they were the alarm company. The police officers thought the alarm went off. Jeff checked the entire library, there were no incidents. They are now thinking that possibly the batteries in the alarms are no good, or perhaps there was a short, or maybe someone hit the alarm accidentally. It was good because that is the first time it has happened since Jeff has been here. It brought to light some issues, the safety officer, Bailey Volk, thought there was going to be a code, and the alarm company thought there was a code; they kept asking for a code. They were wrong, the alarm company does not get a code. We got that cleared up, and we are looking into the problem of why it went off. Subsequently, the safety officer outlined procedures for the whole City, not just the Library, regarding panic buttons. In hindsight it was good, it cleared up a lot of issues, though it produced a lot of anxiety. Early next year we'll have an in-service training on proper use of the panic button.

The two new employees are working out great; Mema's previous position has been posted and will close at the end of the month. We're getting good applicants, 35 so far, and a few are exceptional; hopefully they will follow through and go through the interview process. That was an issue last time, some of the best applicants, and the bilingual applicants, decided not to interview. Staff is busy working on the Winter Reading program, we'll have adult, teen, and children's reading programs this winter. Some pretty cool prizes, like a Stephen King blanket for adults, every book he has written is on this blanket. There will be a Marvel Avengers blanket for the kids.

Some sculptures were donated to the library recently. Near the maker space is "Bouquet of Wrenches," and on the main floor is "Expect the Unexpected." In the bear pit is a heron and the question marks on the front lawn. Alan Root donated these artworks. He's very friendly and supportive of the library.

Maupin: Starting to get some programs rolling. There is a collage class Thursday night that has 10 or more people expressing interest. In December there will be a Family Craft Night and a Christmas tree lighting in front of City Hall on December 4th. Valerie has been working on the Chaff in the Wind project. She submitted the Oregon Heritage grant, which has passed the technical review, and Thursday goes to a committee for recommendations. She's also working on the Wasco County Cultural Trust grant for the Chaff in the Wind project. Valerie has started reading to the preschool class at the school, but has not gone to Head Start yet, as they had a major COVID outbreak. Valerie is going to start the Youth Advisory Council up again in December. She's going to meet up at the high school, in conjunction with the high school librarian. Wants to start provide STEM activities, like once a week after school. She's calling it Weird Science Wednesday. Kids can come in and do some kind of little STEM or science projects.

Mary asked if Maupin is starting to see an increase in circulation. Valerie says yes, it seems like it is starting to go up, the numbers are a little more consistent. The same question was then asked of Jeff about The Dalles. He states in the affirmative as circulation is ticking up. The library is getting crushed on Mondays, the book drop is always full, and staff is having to shelve all day. He's been giving the shelver extra hours to handle the shelving load. Jeff has noticed that the new picture books displayed in the hallway are getting checked out right away. Early readers and chapter books as well. The children's room has seen an increase in foot traffic. Attendance at storytimes has increased and parents are staying and interacting with the room. A lot of these parents are checking out new materials on display. The digital books in the Advantage account on Library2Go have been popular, especially audiobooks. There has been a definite uptick in activity, people are getting more comfortable coming in, the public computers are being used more.

Old business: Mary asked about the city manager attending today's meeting. The city manager has taken a leave of absence due to family health issues, so will not make today's meeting. Corliss asked about the mission statement. It was sent out. Everyone affirmed that they received a copy.

New business: The van project - the library van has about 65,000 miles on it and it's small. At one time the library board talked about getting a more robust outreach vehicle. Jeff got a quote. It is about six months old. He guesses that if we did purchase the outreach van, the quote would probably be closer to $220,000 for next fiscal year. It is a Mercedes Benz Sprinter vans that is 15 inches wider than a similar Ford model. The Mercedes costs a little more, but the additional space is significant. It would be an outreach vehicle that would provide Internet service. For instance, if it made a stop at The Dalles Farmer's Market, or Maupin Days, etc., it would provide Internet service, and we could offer educational workshops. Jeff is looking into the availability of having a canopy to shelter people while they are outside the van waiting to get in, or to shelter programing events outside. Mary mentioned that if it is diesel, fuel would be cheaper.

Mary suggested all-wheel drive and budgeting for maintenance. She also mentioned being able to staff the van as it should be used more than once a week. Perhaps the courier/outreach position needs to be full time, so that more visits could be made with the outreach vehicle. Visits to the schools, senior meal sites, assisted living facilities, and Head Start. Mary loves the idea of having one. Jeff says he doesn't see it being used just once a week, it wouldn't be worth the money. It would need to be on the road most of the week.

Jeff said that at one time Corliss was wondering about the SIP agreement between Google and the City/County. Jeff reached out to the county assessor, and this is just an estimate, but she said the library district with the SIP agreement would be getting an extra $31,000 in tax revenue. That's good for the library district as it would help pay for the library van.

Financial Review: No comments. Corliss enjoys having them each month, so that we know where the money is going, and making sure we're not overspending.

Other business: None

There is no meeting in December. Jeff stated that the City wants things to be consistent and right now all meetings are via Zoom. Most board members want to meet in person, but Jeff is going to check with the City.

Next meeting will be at 4:30 on Tuesday, January 18th, if in person, it will be at The Dalles.

Meeting adjourned at 5:12.
